Luddy Account Information When Leaving IU

IU Policies and Procedures

The Luddy School of Informatics, Computing and Engineering follows IU/UITS policy and procedure regarding account removal when you leave IU. These IU policies are explained in these two IU KB pages:

- About UITS computing account termination
- At IU, what happens to my student computing accounts when I graduate, leave the university, transfer to another campus, or study abroad?

Student Linux Accounts

For students leaving IU, the key part of the above documents is:

After two consecutive terms (fall, spring, and summer are each considered one term) during which you are not enrolled in any courses through the IU registrar, you will be notified by email and given a seven-day window before your accounts are disabled.

After you are no longer enrolled for 2 consecutive terms, your IU status will change to Former Student. Shortly after that happens, you will receive an email informing you that your Luddy Linux accounts will be removed in two weeks. Included in that email is information about how you can keep your Luddy Linux account with the proper sponsorship of a member of the Luddy faculty. So, if you are still doing collaborative work with a member of the Luddy Faculty it is possible for you to keep your account with this sponsorship.

Student Email Note

For details about your student IU email account, please see the UITS KB page Your Google at IU account when you leave IU. As an undergraduate student, you will get a Google at IU email account automatically. However, if you are a graduate student you will get an IU Exchange account by default which will be removed when you leave IU. If you want to keep your IU address active when you leave, you must create a Google at IU email account and forward your IU email to this account before your IU accounts are removed.
